Monkeys sniffed . Something smelled delicious. His mouth watered. He peered down from his tree to the hut below. In Her kitchen, Mama Mary wrapped off the hot coconut cookies. She had just made and put them in the basket. She hurried towards the village market. Monkey's stomach rumbled: ASMama Mary trod down the street. Then there was a Sudden flurry of Skirts and tangle of petticoats. Monkey climbed down for a closer look. Oh my! Mama Mary moaned, I cannot believe all this trouble I have got. When monkey saw her basket broken. He swung down of his tree and scooped of the trouble. Soon all the cookies were gone : I must have more of this trouble. He thought as he licked the crumbs of his paws. He runs to find store that might sell him some. "I had like some trouble", monkey said to the shopkeeper. TheStorekeeper nodded "wait there, here you are". Said the storekeeper, "asack full of trouble" monkey could not wait for some more of the treat called trouble. He sat Down and United theknot of the sack. The three dog burst from: The sack. Three dogs circled him and the monkey run up. He spied a tree ahead and leaped for the branch, gasping his breath and looked down at the dogs glaring at him. When the sun sank behind the village, the dogs slunk away. Monkey swung down from the tree and dashed to the village well. His day had been filled with nothing but trouble. In the moonlight he climbed as high as he could. And the lesson he learned? Don't go looking for the trouble.
